Here is another one that affects Agriculture and Interior (I have added to the Cont. EO log as pending):

"The Secretaries, through the BLM and USFS, shall establish an advisory committee under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) to provide information and advice regarding the development of the management plan and, as appropriate, management of the monument. This advisory committee shall consist of a fair and balanced representation of interested stakeholders, including State and local governments, tribes, recreational users, local business owners, and private landowners."

It appears that the following might fall under the UMRA exemption:

"In recognition of the importance of tribal participation to the care and management of the objects identified above, and to ensure that management decisions affecting the monument reflect tribal expertise and traditional and historical knowledge, a Bears Ears Commission (Commission) is hereby established to provide guidance and recommendations on the development and implementation of management plans and on management of the monument. The Commission shall consist of one elected officer each from the Hopi Nation, Navajo Nation, Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, Ute Indian Tribe of the Uintah Ouray, and Zuni Tribe, designated by the officers' respective tribes. The Commission may adopt such procedures as it deems necessary to govern its activities, so that it may effectively partner with the Federal agencies by making continuing contributions to inform decisions regarding the management of the monument."

Hi Cynthia,

Please see this request for an email pull. This request just came in today. Doing research online, I would think that Dept. of Interior, Land Management may be the main agency involved on this new National Monument that President Obama is proposing. However, I did find some Congressional involvement with other Agencies online. I would like to submit this email pull to ensure that if we have any equities on this topic we find them for this FOIA request.

Dear Kris and Barry-

Thank you for the opportunity to provide input. I do not have any comments on the proposed proclamation.

In case you are interested, however, the preservation of the Bears Ears area is a very heated topic in Utah and beyond. Many articles have been written on Bears Ears (including articles published in the Washington Post, by The Atlantic, and recently in the Denver Post authored by Mark Udall) detailing the controversy and opposing opinions. Quite frankly, the history of the area is fascinating and so is the controversy surrounding its protection. It will be interesting to see the response if it is named a National Monument.

As the President of the Navajo Nation, I've dedicated my life to ensuring that Navajo stories are part of our collective American history. Today, I want to share one of those stories with you.

I am very proud to be both Navajo and American. As the President of the Navajo Nation, I've dedicated my life to ensuring that, as a Navajo, my story -- and our stories -- are part of our collective American history. Today, I want to share one of those stories with you.

There was a time when our nations, American and Navajo, were at war with each other -- when the U.S. Cavalry forcibly rounded up Navajo men, women, and children, and marched them at gunpoint to a foreign land hundreds of miles away. During this time, some of my Navajo ancestors successfully hid at a sacred place of prayer, shelter, and fortitude: the Bears Ears area of Utah.

Bears Ears National Monument

This beautiful piece of land stretches for over a million acres across the southern edge of the state. Its ancient cliff dwellings, ceremonial sites, abundant rock art, countless cultural artifacts, winding creek beds, and expanses of desert land, contain the great history of my nation. This place served to protect my family then, just as it has protected many Native American people throughout the years.

Today, President Barack Obama has signed a proclamation to protect this land as a national monument for future generations of Navajo people and for all Americans. Thanks to his action, this land will be finally given the legal reverence and protection it deserves.

This action reflects the President's profound record on conservation: He has done more than any other president in history to set aside more land and water for the future.

But it is also in accordance with his actions to elevate the voices of Native people. Five sovereign tribal nations petitioned to have this irreplaceable land conserved.

Bears Ears National Monument is sacred not only to the Diné people, but also our Hopi, Ute, and Zuni neighbors. These tribes came together in an unprecedented show of unity to conserve these lands for future generations of all Americans. This intertribal coalition also pushed for a new standard for national monuments and tribal involvement.

With this step to protect and conserve these irreplaceable lands, he has set a new precedent for national monument tribal collaborative management. And he has strengthened the relationship between our Navajo and American nations.

As both Navajo and American, I am proud our President listened to a sovereign appeal and acted to preserve our sacred land for future generations.

Thank you for listening,

Russell Begaye

President, Navajo Nation

You have been assigned to the FOIA request GSA-2017-000321. Additional details for this request are as follows:

Assigned By: Travis S. Lewis
Request Tracking Number: GSA-2017-000321
Due Date: N/A
Requester: James C. Dalrymple
Request Track: Simple
Short Description: N/A
Long Description: All documents, memos, emails, and other records relating to the Bears Ears National Monument. Also, all documents including the terms "Bears Ears," "Bears Ears National Monument," and "San Juan County."
Assigned Comments: Hi Hyacinth,

DeLee and I were doing some research on this request today. I do not think there is much if any GSA involvement on the creation of this National Monument. However, doing research online, we saw that there was Congressional activity over the creation of this National Monument before President Obama leaves office. Some of this communication may have involved GSA OCIA, therefore I am assigning it to you. I am going to place an email pull into OCIO today and it will determine if there is any GSA involvement. I will save and convert the PDF's when Angela returns them to us. Thank you, Travis.

Here is another one that affects Agriculture and Interior (I have added to the Cont. EO log as pending):

"The Secretaries, through the BLM and USFS, shall establish an advisory committee under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) to provide information and advice regarding the development of the management plan and, as appropriate, management of the monument. This advisory committee shall consist of a fair and balanced representation of interested stakeholders, including State and local governments, tribes, recreational users, local business owners, and private landowners."

It appears that the following might fall under the UMRA exemption:

"In recognition of the importance of tribal participation to the care and management of the objects identified above, and to ensure that management decisions affecting the monument reflect tribal expertise and traditional and historical knowledge, a Bears Ears Commission (Commission) is hereby established to provide guidance and recommendations on the development and implementation of management plans and on management of the monument. The Commission shall consist of one elected officer each from the Hopi Nation, Navajo Nation, Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, Ute Indian Tribe of the Uintah Ouray, and Zuni Tribe, designated by the officers' respective tribes. The Commission may adopt such procedures as it deems necessary to govern its activities, so that it may effectively partner with the Federal agencies by making continuing contributions to inform decisions regarding the management of the monument."
